Old Point Comfort.
The date set for this most delightful trip is Tuesday, August 14, and all who desire an outing for the summer for the smallest possible expense should arrange to go on this personally conducted tour to the east. This excursion has been taken by so many in years gone by that it is almost useless to speak of the many attractions and inducements offered. Particulars will be published later, but those desiring special information should write to W.
A. Wilgus, S. P. A. C. and O. Ry., Hopkinsville, Ky.

Observations
....at Random
While some of the exprose and railroad officials profess to believe that the recent train robbery near Wick-liffe was the work of amateurs, others are outspoken in the conclusion that old hands planned and executed it.
In the first place, they got the wrong train. The fast mail that carries the largest sums of money was due at that time, but chance, to be laid out that night and, another train, the one robbed, was running on its time. The robbers did not compel the engineer to run the engine, but took charge of it themselves.
One of the most reckless and dare-devil features of the hold-up occurred in the express car, after the robbers had done their work. There were two in the car, and one kept the messenger still while the other blew open the safe. The latter said to the messenger before he went to work, "If you move I'll put a hole through your forehead —and don't forget I can do it, too!" After he had gotten the money and he and his pals had started to leave the car, the one who had made the threat seemed to reconsider his purpose, and tapping to the messenger he said:
"Maybe you don't think I can do it.
Now I'm going to show you! I'll clip the right side off your hat!" The terror-stricken messenger stood motionless against the side of the car as the robber threw up his pistol and fired. Bang!
True to his boast, the right side of the hat was clipped.
"Now for the left!" exultantly shouted the bandit and without any apparent trouble he clipped that off, too.
The bullets came so close to the messenger's head he could almost feel them. To the intense relief of the latter and the mortal terror of the baggage man, the robber then turned to the latter, who had up his hands, and planted a bullet neatly between his hands and just over his head. This expert marksman is Nelson, the one who escaped, and his companions say he was drunk, having been bitten by a moccasin in the woods, and drunk a large quantity of whiskey to counteract the poison.
Near the scene of the robbery there were numerous whiskey and beer bottles—enough to hold sufficient whiskey to last three men several nights. The number of bottles has created a doubt in the minds of some of the officials as to the number of robbers, and they are inclined to think there were more than three.
It has been claimed by Mr. Kipling and others that "short stories may be written in youth, but novels must be the work of maturity." Apropos a writer gives the following figures for and against:
"There are undoubtedly great examples to cite in support of his view.
Richardson wrote 'Clarissa Harlowe' when he was near 60; Fielding 'Tom Jones' at 43; Goldsmith 'The Vicar of Wakefield' at 38, and Sterne 'Tristram Shandy' after 45. Cervantes published the first part of 'Don Quixote' at 58, and the second at 68; Defoe his 'Robinson Crusoe' at 58; Bunyan his 'Pilgrim's Progress' at 50, and Addison was going on 40 when he created Sir Roger. Scott published 'Waverley' at 43; Gay's 'The Annals of the Parish' at 42; Peacock 'Crochet Castle' at 46; Thackeray 'Vanity Fair' at 36; Trollope began his Barchester series at 40, and Charles Reade wrote 'The Cloister and the Hearth' at 46.
Mr. Blackmore did not write 'Lorna Doone' till he was about 44, and it may surprise some to be reminded that Stenson was about 40 when he wrote 'Prince Otto'; Disraeli wrote 'Vivian Grey' when he was only 22, but he was 40 when he published 'Coningsby,' and if Lytton began equally early with 'Pelham,' his best work as novelist was the work of his late majority. On the other hand, Roderick Random' was written at 20 or 27, and 'Pickwick' at 24. Probably the most precious novel in its way ever written was 'The Ordinal of Richard Feveril,' written when Mr. Meredith was about 30.
"Nor are the ladies much more precocious in spite of the wonderful Jane Austen, who wrote 'Pride and Prejudice' as soon as she was of age. She at all events already knew her world, but her world was undeniably rather small one. Little Fanny Burney, too, knew her world early, and published 'Evelina' at 26. As for the Brontës, critics, whether for praise or blame, agree that they had to draw on their imagination for their worldly knowledge. On the other hand George Eliot did not commence as novelist till she was nearing 40, nor did Mrs. Gaskell; Miss Mitford began 'Our Village' at 38, and Mrs. Oliphant her 'Chronicles of Carlingford' at 42 or 43, while Miss Edgeworth published 'Castle Rackrent' at 35." A practice closely akin to hibernation is reported in the British Medical Journal to be general among Russian peasants in the Pskov Government, where food is scanty to a degree almost equivalent to chronic famine.
"Not having provisions enough to carry them through the whole year, they adopt the economical expedient of spending one half of it in sleep.
This custom has existed among them from time immemorial. At the first fall of snow the whole family gathers around the stove, lies down, ceases to wrestle with the problems of human existence, and quietly goes to sleep.
Once a day every one wakes up to a piece of hard bread, of which an amount sufficient to last six months has providently been baked in the previous autumn. When the bread has been washed down with a draught of water, every one goes to sleep again.

The members of the family take it in turn to watch and keep the fire alight.
After six months of this reposeful existence the family wakes up, shakes itself, goes out to see if the grass is growing, and by and by sets to work at summer tasks. The country remains comparatively lively till the following winter, when again all signs of life disappear and all is silent, except we presume for the snoring of the sleepers. This winter sleep is called lotska. These slugs folk evidently come within the terms of Touch-stone's definition of a natural philosopher."

According to reports Princeton, Ky., is about to have a scandal as sensational as the one that recently exploded in Hopkinsville. The people involved are of the most prominent families, and are a young wife and a young man who happens not to be her husband. Full developments are expected in a few days.

STONE AGE REPRESENTATIVES Live on Honey and the Produce of the Chase.
The Guayakis of Patagonia are extremely shy, always taking to flight on being seen, while the thickness of the forests in which they dwell, and their extraordinary physical activity, effectually prevent their being followed, says the Geographical Journal.
Herr Schütz was only once fortunate enough to obtain sight of an individual of the tribe—dark in color and completely naked—when he glided down from a tree and vanished in the depths of the forest in an instant. He learned, however, from an old inhabitant of Carayao that a Guayaki man was once captured by means of the boleadoras, and brought to Asuncion, but of his subsequent fate no information could be obtained. The tribe is greatly hated by the settlers on account of the depredations committed by it on the young cattle and horses, and for this reason a merciless war is waged upon them whenever possible. In 1898 a settler came upon a Guayaki woman and two children in the forest and captured one of the latter after wounding the mother. Photographs of the child were obtained by Dr. Endlich of Leip-sic, one of which is reproduced in Globe. The body is well nourished and in good proportion, the head large and the forehead well developed. A few Guayaki words were noted by Dr.
Endlich, but, while confirming to some extent previous information on the subject, are not sufficient to allow definite conclusions to be based upon them. The Guayakis are of special interest as living representatives of the stone age, making use of a stone axe for obtaining honey from trees.
They live solely on this and the produce of the chase.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.
The Japanese population of San Francisco has reached nearly 20,000.
New York derives a yearly income of $6,500,000 from corporations for privileges enjoyed in the use of the streets.
A good government movement has been started at Portland, Ore., in which a Roman Catholic Archbishop, Jewish rabbi, a Presbyterian minister, a Unitarian clergyman, and others of diversified views are working together.
General William Bull, superintendent of the Buffalo police department, will not tolerate drinking by patrolmen while on duty. A patrolman was recently reprimanded and fined $75, although a charge of intoxication was not sustained.
Ulrich, N. Y., has two health boards.
One is headed by the democratic republican and the other appointed by the republican county judge, who has upheld the authority of the common council.
As each board is removing the subordinate officials of the other this arrangement may work for economy, if not for health.
Mayor Hart of Boston has suspended the issue of the City Record, a weekly paper started under the administration of Mayor Josiah Quincy to give news and information concerning the municipal departments, city advertising, and statistics. It has not been a success, and its paid circulation has been small.

One of the most unique laws ever passed will shortly go into effect in Winchester, W. Va. The city council of that place passed a law requiring every citizen to pour kerosene oil on every open pool and that every open barrel shall have the spigot at the bottom. The town is infested with mosquitoes, and the law was passed in order to make the place an attractive resort for summer boarders.

RAILROAD BUSINESS.
Great Increases Reported in All Branches Everywhere.
That very reliable and industrious statistical bureau, known as the interstate commerce commission, has just made a report on the condition of the railway properties of the country which forms a valuable contribution to the many proofs of revived industrial activity all over the country.
The railroad business for the year is always regarded as the most trustworthy barometer of industrial conditions. It must be remembered, however, that the carrier business is the last to feel the effects of revived industrial activity. Restoration of business confidence must take tangible form in the shape of increased production before the railroads reap any benefit. Their share of the general prosperity does not come until factories are well under way and crops are harvested. The business of the railroads in 1899 was taken, therefore, as a very reliable indication of the permanency of the improved industrial conditions that became manifest in 1897 and 1898.

It took 36,703 locomotives to haul the freight and passengers' business in 1899, an increase of 400 over the number employed in 1898. The total number of cars used in the service was 1,375,916, an increase of 49,742 over the previous year. The number of passengers carried during the year was 523,176,508, an increase of 22,109,827 over the number handled in 1898. The number of tons of freight carried was 959,763,583 tons, an increase of 80, 757,376 for the year. The gross earnings of the roads were $1,313,618,618, an increase over the previous year of $66,254,497.
More significant than this increase in business and in earnings, however, was the increase in the number of persons employed on railroads. The total number employed was 928,924, an increase of 344,466 over the previous year.
